

IONIAN ISLANDS
KEFALONIA

Both “the jewel” and the largest of the Ionian islands, Kefalonia combines countless beaches with dramatic scenery under an achingly blue sky.

Myrtos beach

Agia Efimia

Lying opposite the mouth of the Gulf of Corinth and just sixty miles south of Paxos, Kefalonia is ringed with countless bays and inlets. There are beaches of spectacular white coral, while on the south coast the beaches are of fine golden sand that shelve gently under an aquamarine sea, making them perfect for children.

Elsewhere, subterranean lakes, stalactite-encrusted caverns and marine turtles wait to be discovered.

Thanks to a good road network, the island lends itself to easy exploration. Venetian fortresses and Byzantine churches, underground Mycenaean tombs dating from 1200BC, a ruined Roman villa with dazzling mosaics, precipitous mountain communities, a host of small fishing villages and the unique Kefalonia Firs jostle for attention.

Towering above at 1627m, Mount Aenos looks down upon a luxurious landscape of pine, olive, cypress, orange, lemon and grape, imbued with the heady scent of wild lavender.

Diverse in all that it offers, Kefalonia provides sophistication and tradition

THE SOUTH COAST

From Lassi to Scala the south coast has a series of beautiful sandy beaches. Easily accessible by car, these beaches have the dramatic backdrop of Mount Aenos and foothills of olive groves, vineyards and cypress trees. Makris Yalos and Lassi have the distractions of a popular resort with watersports and an extensive selection of tavernas, bars and shops. Katelios has plenty of tavernas and restaurants whilst Sparta is smaller and quieter.

The drive from south coast to north coast takes up to two hours.

FISCARDO

The attractive port of Fiscardo, with its beautiful Venetian architecture, lies on the north east coast and looks out to the island of Ithaca. On one side of the horseshoe bay, a sixth century basilica, surrounded by pines, looks down on to the eighteenth century houses, tavernas and café bars, which line the waterfront.

Pebble beaches in secluded coves, below forested hillsides, can be found on either side of Fiscardo Bay. Small hamlets hide away amongst the olives and pines on the hillsides behind Fiscardo. The transfer from Kefalonia Airport takes approximately two hours.

KARAVOMILOS

Karavomilos is a small, quiet village which lies in-between Sami, the island's main port, and Agia Efimia. Here you will find one of the island's most beautiful attractions, the Melissani Lake. This was discovered in the 1950s when the roof collapsed to the cave unveiling the sparkling lake beneath. Now you can go on a small boat tour of the cave and learn about the water phenomena in which the sink holes from the coast of Argostoli deliver water underground to the Karavomilos and Melissani Lakes. There are a few pebble beaches to choose from and just a short walk into Sami where there are restaurants and souvenir shops to choose from.

AGIA EFIMIA

Agia Efimia is a small port at the northern end of Sami Bay, on the east coast and looks out across the sea to Ithaca. The coastline on either side of the village holds many attractive white-pebble coves and small beaches shelving into clear waters.

The waterfront of restaurants and bars leads to small side streets with a bakery and shops. Eight kilometres away, the small town and port of Sami has a daily ferry to Ithaca and a further four kilometres south is the beautiful beach of Antisamos.

VILLA POSEIDON

KARAVOMILOS • KEFALONIA

Privacy is the order of the day at Villa Poseidon. This cosy terracotta home is in a woodland of olive and pine trees, set just outside the quiet rural village of Karavomilos. Embrace this privacy by relaxing on a sun lounger or firing up the barbecue and dining outdoors in the shade. Wander around the villa's gardens and you'll find them complete with fruit trees that you can pick from, making an atmospheric setting for quiet evenings in.

Karavomilos is equally enticing, offering a couple of charming tavernas, a bakery and waterfront walks. The nearby town of Sami, a busy port, offers even more dining options and a taste of authentic Kefalonia culture. The beautiful beaches of the island are just a short drive away.

TRAPEZAKI VILLAS

TRAPEZAKI • KEFALONIA

Sandwiched between massive Mount Aenos and the sea, with views of both, these little family-run villas are ideal whether you're a couple or a couple of friends.

Each of the three Trapezaki Villas has its own good-sized pool and shaded patio area, both facing the sea below, with excellent views south towards Zakynthos. The friendly owners are really attentive and also run the local supermarket next-door, so you're always well-supplied and looked-after if you want to be. But you'll also find plenty of privacy here, with your own garden and more outdoor space than you'll usually get in a two-bedroom property, so you can properly relax in your own home-from-home.

Trapezaki has the best of both worlds in beach terms; the village's own beach is small but rarely busy, and it's a short drive to other larger beaches – popular Lourdas is just 10 minutes away. Located in the small hamlet of Tzaramelata on the outskirts of Fiscardo and within a 10 minute drive of the harbour, the villa, spread over three levels, is set within a very private, hillside location.

Facing west, the sunsets from here are spectacular and the location allows 180 degree views to the sea. The nearest tavernas and two mini markets are in Maganos, a 2 minute drive or 15 minute walk.

Below are the pretty beaches of Alaties and Jerusolo. Both are a 5 minute drive or, for the more energetic, a 25 minute walk. Both beaches have tavernas.

ELENI'S COTTAGE

FISCARDO • KEFALONIA

Eleni's Cottage is a cosy little hideaway snuggled in behind blooms of bright pink bougainvillea, yet just a stone's throw from the seafront and the charming fishing village of Fiscardo. It is the perfect choice for couples and families in search of privacy and tranquillity, but who don't want to be in a remote location – a car isn't a prerequisite here.

This little cottage has everything you could need for a relaxing holiday. The interior is compact, well-equipped and comfortable, but, in our opinion, you're likely to spend most of your time outside. Dine in the pretty little courtyard under the old fig tree and grapevine, or peek through the apricot tree and fuchsia flowers on the front veranda for views across the straits to the mountains of Ithaca.

The villa is just one road back from the sea, and the gentle slosh of the waves is audible on a quiet evening. Walk a few minutes along the coast to find a delightful little beach, or just a little further to find yourself in the heart of Fiscardo, with its shops, tavernas, harbour-side restaurants and pastel-coloured buildings.
