

Ithaca

It is Ithaca's distinct lack of mainstream tourism, coupled with its mythological past, which makes it an island well worth visiting. Although many people have heard of Ithaca, few have ever come to stay. For those that do, their reward is a peaceful, strongly traditional Greek island, mountainous and scenic, with some very pretty villages and sparsely populated beaches.

Ithaca divides into two halves. Mount Aetos, which joins north with south, is barely half a mile in width at its narrowest point. The highest peak on the island is Neritos at just over 800 metres. The west coast is very rugged, with sheer mountainside rising steeply from the sea for much of its length. The east side is gentler, and its indented coastline provides several natural harbours, which is where Ithaca's three main coastal villages – Frikes, Kioni and Vathy – are to be found.

Frikes is the smallest of the three and delightfully sleepy, with a lazy, very Greek air. Four tavernas and a café or two front the sea here, which doubles as the mooring place for a line of colourful fishing boats. With the mountain behind, and green hills to either side, Frikes enjoys a very natural, unspoiled setting and offers good walking country. Some very nice white-pebble beaches can be found within a 15 minute walk.

Kioni is very pretty indeed. Thankfully, Ithaca having no airport, it has not succumbed to over-commercialisation. The horseshoe bay, backed by wooded hills, is lined with neo-classical houses. There is often a flotilla moored up, and a number of good family-run restaurants and small shops around the harbour. The bay itself has three or four beaches dotted around it. With the hire of a boat it is easy – and fun – to discover others beyond it for yourself.

Vathy is the charming island capital. Built along the sides of a long fjordlike bay, Vathy has some lovely old buildings along its expansive waterfront. There are some good beaches dotted around the peninsula to the east, and in season small water-taxi will take you to and fro. Scuba diving, snorkeling and sea kayak excursions can be arranged from Vathy by our island representative.

There is a bus service between the three seaside villages but this is limited so car hire would be a good idea for further exploration of the island.

Was Ithaca really the homeland of Odysseus? There are plenty of clues – certain descriptions and places Homer mentions do seem to fit – and it is fun to do a little detective work and see if you agree.

Kyparissa Apartments Kioni

The Kyparissa Apartments occupy a prime location just above Kioni harbour, and afford excellent views over the bay. A 2-3 minute walk via a footpath and some steps down the small hill brings you directly down to the harbour-front.

The five apartments here are attractively furnished and offer comfort, privacy and plenty of room. The three 2-bedroom units are on the upper floor. Each comprises a spacious ground floor living room, slightly split-level with guest wc and well equipped kitchen area above (full cooker, fridge, dining table and chairs) and living area 2 steps below. French windows open onto the large open terrace, stepped back from its neighbours for privacy, furnished with sunbeds and boasting fine views over Kioni's horseshoe bay. Stairs lead up to the two bedrooms on the top floor, one double and one twin, each with air conditioning and own balcony (one front sea view, one rear mountain view). Also on this level is the large tiled shower room with hairdryer.

Each of the pair of 1-bedroom garden apartments on the ground floor has its own entrance from the pretty garden. The living room has a fitted kitchen area (same facilities as upstairs) and there is a separate air-conditioned twin bedroom with a tiled shower room en suite. Each 1-bedroom apartment has its own delightful garden area to the front and side, bordered by flowering shrubs and almond trees, with sunbeds, table and chairs, and you will find plenty of secluded spots with or without shade. Partial sea views are to be had over the garden and rooftop of a house to the front.

Kyparissa has its own parking and motorboats can be moored overnight at the harbour.

The combination of central but quiet location, views, comfort and space makes Kyparissa our number one choice of apartments in Kioni.

The ground floor comprises a spacious open-plan lounge with comfortable sofas, TV, safety deposit box, bathroom (bath with shower, hairdryer, washing machine) and full kitchen (dishwasher, full cooker and fridge). The house has light attractive décor and modern tasteful furnishings. Set in an olive grove it has a BBQ and a dining area under the trees. Sunbeds are provided.

Stavros, high above Polis Bay to the west and c 2 kms inland from Frikes, is a thriving village. Dominated by an imposing church, and well endowed

Captain Yannis Vathy

Overlooking the sea at the quiet southern side of Vathy Bay, a ten minute walk from the central square, this smart little complex is built on three levels in the gardens. All rooms have recently (2011) undergone a full renovation and upgrade to a high specification.

The lowest level houses the attractive 120 sq m seawater pool (depth 1.15m-2.20m) with accompanying snack bar and covered seating area above the sea. A path and some steps (or a ramp for wheelchair access) lead to the 11 Junior Suites and apartments. These are all ground floor, housed in several small blocks.

The Junior Suites are slightly split-level, with a living area below containing a sofa-bed for a child, a shower room off and a double-bedded sleeping area two steps above. All possess lcd tv, air conditioning, hairdryer, mini-fridge and tea-making equipment, and are beautifully furnished in a sophisticated modern style. All, too, possess a wide covered front terrace with views over the gardens, pool and sea to the far side of the bay.

The apartments are similar with the addition of a good-sized separate living room (can sleep 2 children) and kitchenette for light meals.

More steps lead up to the 12 double rooms which, being at the highest level, enjoy the best views. These have the same facilities as the Junior Suites and are, again, individually and stylishly furnished - the views over the bay from each room's front balcony or terrace are stunning. Upper floor rooms have double beds, first floor rooms are twins.

You can swim nearby but most people walk 10-15 minutes around the bay to sandy Loutsas beach. Further excellent beaches can be found the other side of the headland, best reached by small motorboat which can be moored outside the hotel.
