The Azores islands are an excellent destination for birdwatching. Here, you can find two of Europe's rarest birds: The Azores Bullfinch, Pyrrhula murina, endemic to a small area of São Miguel and the Mosteiro's storm-petrel, Oceanodroma monteiroi, breeding on the two islets south of Graciosa Island.

Other species seen here are the Atlantic Canary, Serinus canaria, an exclusive species from Macaronesia, as well as several subspecies such as the Common Chaffinch, Fringilla coelebs moreletti, the São Miguel Goldcrest, Regulus regulus azoricus, the Azores Woodpigeon, Columba palumbus azorica, and the Buzzard, Buteo buteo rothschildi.

Currently, the Azores holds the largest colony of Cory's Shearwater, Calonectris diomedea borealis, and one of the largest colonies of Roseate tern, Sterna dougallii, worldwide. Altogether, the archipelago has over 30 bird species which nest, and also, due to the islands central position in the Atlantic Ocean you may also observe migratory birds coming from America and Eurasia.

The number of species seen in the islands is close to 400, including a few which are extremely rare and even some which have been newly sighted in the Western Palearctic.

After passing by Furnas, you will exit the volcanic crater and arrive in Povoação, the first settlement on São Miguel. The trail begins in the parish of Faial da Terra, lasts approximately 3 hours 30 minutes and extends for 4,5km. Initially, the trail climbs through a steep path with a breathtaking view over the parish and the ocean until it reaches Sanguinho, a place that owes its name to the abundant endemic plant (Frangula azorica). Then the trail continues through a forest of Japanese Cedar (Cryptomeria japonica) and some other species such as the Ginger Lilies (Hedychium gardnerianum) and the Australian Cheesewood (Pittosporum undulatum) before it reaches the waterfall of Salto do Prego, in one of the most beautiful places on the island. This is the perfect stopover for a picnic lunch and for bathing in the crystal clear waters of the waterfall.

The return route is along the path parallel to a stream that flows from the waterfall to the parish of Faial da Terra, through lush vegetation. The return to Ponta Delgada includes a comfort stop in the village of Povoação to taste the local pastry "Fofas da Povoação". On the way back to Ponta Delgada, you will cross to the north coast of the island where it will be possible to see some unique tea fields, the hills and the landscape of the north coast, passing by Ribeira Grande, the second largest city on the island and then crossing back to the south coast through the narrower part of the island, at 8km width. After a brief drive along the south coast, the activity ends with the arrival in Ponta Delgada.

This 11km trail starts on a dirt path through woods of Japanese Cedar (Cryptomeria japonica), Eucalyptus (Eucalyptus globulus), Australian cheesewood (Pittosporum undulatum), wild kahili ginger (Hedychium gardnerianum), New Zealand flax (Phormium tenax, a New Zealand plant) and many endemic plants. The trail continues along a levada (about 2km) until you reach a wider area, with wide slopes on both sides going to the rim of Lagoa do Fogo. During the ascent there are several places from where you can enjoy a magnificent view of Vila Franca do Campo and its Islet and the hills on the south side of the island. The stop for lunch (included) will be along the shores of the lake.

The return to our starting point is made by a path that traverses an area covered by endemic vegetation which then flows into an area of pastures as we descend and approach the end of the hike. ### Guided Walk - Ribeira Funda and Praia da Viola - Full Day

The day starts with a drive from Ponta Delgada, crossing the island from south to north by the narrowest part. After passing by the only city on the north coast, Ribeira Grande, a great coastline awaits you with its amazing views. On the way, it is also possible to see the vast fields with tea plants, one of very few found in Europe. This 5.5km trail begins in the centre of a small place on the north side of the island called Ribeira Funda and takes around 3 hours to complete. The walking starts in an open area, turning into a path with dense vegetation, mostly composed by Australian Cheesewood (Pittosporum undulatum) and Ginger Lilies (Hedychium gardnerianum). The trail then leads us to some old water mills that were once used to transform wheat and corn into flour and used in the confection of bread (the primary food for families all over the island) and passing by various streams until you reach a viewpoint, from where you can see your next stop - Praia da Viola beach. Praia da Viola is a small, quiet beach with rough sand, flanked by a cliff with several water springs. If the ocean is calm, it is possible to go for a quick swim. In the middle of this hidden beach, there is a trail that takes you to the end of the tour, in the small parish of Maia. Some parts are very narrow and very steep and might also be slippery. On the return to Ponta Delgada, passing by the northern coast of the island, there is still time to stop at the oldest tea factory on São Miguel, the Gorreana tea factory, for some tea tasting and a stop in Caldeira Velha, located in the hills of the mountain of Lagoa do Fogo where it's possible to have bathe in the relaxing hot waters. Back on the road, pass by Ribeira Grande before crossing back to the south coast and after a brief drive arriving in Ponta Delgada to end the activity.
